President's Message

Lucky for me, our little fellowship has been so well run over the years that being president is not a heavy burden. Thus far, my biggest presidential challenge is getting this monthly newsletter message done on time. I now feel empathy for authors with writer's block, staring at a blinking cursor waiting for an idea to form.

It's always my intention to create a few pearls of wisdom that might enhance the reader's life just a little. However, those pearls can be elusive, just like the real ones. The heart is willing but the words don't come easily. Perhaps there's a lesson to be learned here - just start typing. That's what I did and the thoughts finally arrived and became these words. They'll have to suffice for now. Maybe next time I'll receive more wisdom from the Universe.

Every year, back comes Spring, with nasty little birds yapping their fool heads off and the ground all mucked up with plants.
