President's Message

I wanted to use this poem by John Dos Passos in my New Year's Program last week, but it didn't fit. So here it is just because it made me laugh. One day still won't change the world, but we can hope that 2021 will be happier and safer for us all.

Happy New Year!

Margaret Evans

"Why won't they let a year die without bringing in a new one on the instant, can't they use birth control on time? I want an interregnum. The stupid years patter on with unrelenting feet, never stopping - rising to little monotonous peaks in our imaginations at festivals like New Year's and Easter and Christmas - But, goodness, why need they do it?? "

John Dos Passos

Is there any religion whose followers can be pointed to as distinctly more amiable and trustworthy than those of any other? If so, this should be enough. I find the nicest and best people generally profess no religion at all, but are ready to like the best men of all religions.
